Imagining 2029

EHTEL imagines a positive, digital future in which all citizens will have better access to their health data and to their health care and healthcare services thanks to digital tools and mobile apps. Health system as a whole will benefit from a future in which health and care professionals from many different sectors, including the hospital and home, work closely together with citizens - using digital technologies. A more synchronised use of data will also improve the response of governments to pandemics, such as the 2020-2021 COVID-19 outbreaks, and will benefit the growth of European businesses and industries.
